

Name

[Redacted]

Phone

[Redacted]

Email

[Redacted]

Comments

A recent rear-end collision with minimum damaged that looked like a paint job ($700 to $800) would correct, became a $2400 insurance job. In retrospect, I suspect, the repair facility had an unsupervised opportunity to replace unneeded parts and pass costs onto my insurance co. which passed those costs onto another insurance co. I suspect jobs under $2500 are loosely scrutinized and therefore the smallest job ends up at $2500.